Location: London

System: Type 200

Client: Arke Creative

As part of a wider office fit-out project, workplace design specialists Arke Creative sought a flexible partitioning solution capable of supporting multiple styles of meeting and collaboration.

Movawall was approached to deliver a movable wall system that would integrate seamlessly into the contemporary office interior while providing practical day-to-day flexibility.

The requirement was to create a meeting space that could operate either as two independent rooms or as one larger combined environment when needed.

Acoustic separation, ease of operation, and a clean architectural appearance were central to the specification, ensuring the system complemented the wider workplace aesthetic without compromising functionality. Movawall supplied and installed a Type 200 movable wall system comprising five panels.

The system allows the two meeting rooms to be separated quickly and efficiently while also enabling the space to be opened up into a larger collaborative environment when required.

The panels were completed in a standard white finish, providing a clean and understated appearance that integrates effortlessly into the surrounding interior design.
