Smoove

Having outgrown their previous offices, Smoove – a company operating in the property sector (formerly ULS) – took the decision to take on three floors at Masters Court.

Location: London

System: Type G200

Clients: HNB, Leap Architects

Smoove swiftly appointed HNB and Leap Architects to deliver an overhaul of the dated interior that would better suit their team.

Movawall were approached to deliver a glass moving wall capable of separating the ground floor kitchen and main open plan space when required. Our Type G200 system was chosen, which provides transfer of natural light when the partition is closed while simultaneously stopping the transfer of sound.

The minimalist manifestations applied to the glazed panels along with their black painted frames have been designed to match a number of fixed glass partitions within the space, offering a consistent design throughout.
