The London School of Hygiene

Movawall's Type 100E Fully Electric movable wall was specified to provide a flexible solution for this lecture theatre, enabling the space to be transformed at the touch of a button.

Location: London

System: Type 100E

The fully automated system allows staff to open or divide the room in just minutes, creating either one large teaching space or two independent lecture theatres as required.

With an acoustic rating of Rw 58dB, the system delivers exceptional sound insulation, allowing simultaneous AV presentations and lectures to take place on either side of the wall without disruption. Each panel was individually handcrafted to millimetre precision, accurately matching every step and riser before being finished with fabric-wrapped acoustic panels to enhance both the aesthetics and acoustic performance of the space.

Installed by Movawall's experienced in-house technicians, the completed system provides a reliable, easy-to-operate solution that offers the flexibility demanded by modern educational environments while maintaining outstanding acoustic performance.
